

A great chance to boost your CV: write an article for SJOL.

We are currently accepting articles for the next issue of the Student Journal of Law. Our deadline for submissions is Friday 28 June 2013.

Past issues can be viewed at www.sjol.co.uk

Why write an article?

Every book on careers in law admires the value of writing an article. Every pupillage secretary and every graduate recruiter is looking for an exceptional person. Firms and chambers say that writing an article provides a really good talking point at an interview – and greatly increases your chances of getting an interview in the first place.

Requirements for submissions can be found at; <http://www.sjol.co.uk/submissions> - Please ensure you read this and comply with it.

For any questions, please contact your university representative, Josh Bernholtz.
E-mail: j.bernholtz@hotmail.co.uk

To submit an article for consideration for the next issue, please email the Editor on sjol.sub@gmail.com

- with the subject 'Submission: [Title]'
- attaching your article as a Word document called '[Title]' (or a shortened version of the title)
- ensuring your name is somewhere in the body of the email

Formatting

- Articles should be typed in size 12 Calibri
- 1.5 spacing should be used
- There should be a line between paragraphs
- New paragraphs should start at the beginning of the line (NOT tabbed)
- Citations should be placed in the text or as footnotes (either is fine)
- British English should be used. In particular, this includes spelling 'judgment' without an 'e' after the 'g'.
- Cases should be italicised, with the neutral citation (if applicable) as well as a report citation (if applicable): eg Stack v Dowden [2007] UKHL 17, [2007] 2 AC 432
- There should be no comma when citing a statute: eg Law of Property Act 1925

Please note: due to the number of articles we receive and our time restraints, articles which are not submitted in this format may be rejected.
