

ESRC Seminar Series

“The Corporation at/in War”

The Critical Corporation Project presents an interdisciplinary panel to debate the question of the corporation in, and at, war. There is increasing talk of corporate complicity in war crimes, wars being fought for Big Oil, private mercenary companies fighting states' wars by proxy, and companies profiting of conflict more generally. Beyond the newspaper headlines, what are the facts and figures? How are we to think about these issues, can we temper or avoid for-profit involvement in wars or is it inevitable? What are we to make of arms companies' CSR efforts, and the various soft law instruments that have emerged on the topic?

Chaired by Grietje Baars, The City Law School.

21 April: 18:30 start, followed by a drinks reception at 20:30

SORCHA MCLEOD
Lecturer, Sheffield University School of Law
'Regulating human rights in the context of outsourcing military logistics and armed security'

VINO KANAPATIPILLAI
PhD Candidate, School of Oriental & African Studies
'Private sector involvement in the British Army'

DAVID WHYTE
Professor, University of Liverpool Dept. of Sociology, Social Policy and Criminology.
'The corporation, security and war'

TOM ANDERSON
Researcher, Corporate Watch
'Corporate complicity in Gaza drone attacks'

Room AG03, College Building
City University London
Northampton Square, London EC1V 0HB

Registration: www.cass.city.ac.uk/news-and-events/events